Do you want to become confident in public speaking, improve your impromptu communication skills and learn how to give feedback in a constructive fashion? Many of us are nervous when it comes to speaking in front of an audience. But fortunately, there are ways to appear – and to become – more confident on the stage.

In this workshop, we will learn how to use body language, apply our voice, and interact with the audience for delivering appealing presentations. We will practice speaking in front of an audience both in prepared and spontaneous situations (e.g., the question session after your talk). We will learn how to keep the timing, smoothen transitions between topics and how to deliver a first impression that captures the audience's attention. Additionally, we will practice an approach on delivering constructive, motivating feedback.

Please prepare a 5-min PowerPoint (or comparable, approximately 5 slides) presentation introducing yourself/your current research project/a topic you want to present for the workshop.
